NATIONAL WEALTH. From the last number of DeBow's Review we take a paragraph which presents a summary of the aggregate wealth of the United States, which is worthy of preservation. It will be seen that Agricultural wealth is by April, 1857, and duly recorded in Alexandria far the larger item in the list. Considering the and Fairiax counties, the undersigned will, at vast expanse of country which is yet unbroken by the plough, and from which no golden harvests are gleaned, we may well wonder what our national wealth may be at the end of twenty years, if fanaticism will allow us to continue a nation so long We have nei-
